

Job Offer Letters

In the case Vaugh v. Workers' Compensation Appeal Board (Carrara Steel Erectors), the court decided that an employer's job-offer letter does not have to explicitly state the activities to be performed upon returning to work, if a capability chart is attached. However, the work-capability chart must provide assurances that the work is within the necessary modifications needed for claimant.