

When Should I Report My Workers' Comp Claim?

Are you wondering when you need to tell your employer about your workplace-related injury or illness? Do you have questions about what timeframe you must follow in order to receive workers' compensation benefits? Have you found yourself asking about how quickly you must act in order to be eligible for workers' comp?

In this video, which is part of our ongoing series of workers' comp FAQs, Martin Law attorney Matt Wilson provides a general answer to the question of when you should report your claim for workers' comp.

If you need help filing for workers' compensation benefits, or if you still have questions about the reporting timeline for workers' comp claims, please reach out to us to set up a free consultation and get the answers you need.